Please note that updates to this document are highlighted in yellow with either an arrow or a jagged bubble

First and foremost, SST 13 hopes that each and every one of you are taking the necessary precautions to protect and care for you and your families' physical and mental health needs during this unprecedented time of uncertainty. We recognize that this is a very stressful and even scary time in our individual and global history. We also acknowledge that during this time you may be feeling overwhelmed and uncertain about the lack of specific information or overwhelming information that you may have access to and ways to organize it.

We want to assure you that you are not alone in this time. As your SST, we are here to offer support. Our goal is not about compliance, it is about supporting your efforts to meet the diverse needs of your students during the COVID-19 Crisis. Presently, the bulk of our support is through resource sharing and being a 'thought partner' as the need arises. We know that as professionals, you all have access to many sources of information and it is often difficult to vet, manage and process it all. Thus, we have created this COVID-19 Toolkit of Organized Resources, which will be updated as information is made readily available, to help you to order and better access the varying guidance and informational documents and resources from federal and state agencies and professional organizations (federal, state, local, and specialized).

This information will be updated regularly through our SST website @ www.sst13.org

While this is a time of high anxiety and uncertainty, it is also a time for creativity, innovation, and out of the box thinking as we try to maintain the delivery of a continuum of educational services and supports to our students and families in a “Good Faith Effort- reasonable, fair, and accessible.” We organized the resources in this toolkit based on what we felt was critically relevant to your work not only today; but moving forward towards the future of full reentry into formalized public educational structures, whatever that may be. We have included graphics from resources that we feel are user friendly and should help to put things in a clear context as it relates to current practices and trends. We have also taken the liberty to make links to materials more easily accessible to reduce the stress of trying to type in long IP addresses, etc.

Updated

The Council of Administrators of Special Education and the Council for Exceptional Children presented a 5-part webinar series on Navigating the COVID-19 Crisis. The webinar series focused on thinking about the big picture items. For example, focusing on what is important: 1.) Pandemic- we have never been in this space before and thus new rules may need to be written 2.) Engaging in Care- caring for the physical and mental health of oneself and your family, and 3.) Support- support is available from professional organizations and other colleagues as we all try to navigate this unprecedented time in our history.

Additionally, the webinar stressed the importance of not focusing primarily on meeting the rigor of compliance, but thinking innovatively about what can be done to support students with disabilities in coordinated ways that are in a Good Faith Effort- appropriate, reasonable and accessible, during this pandemic.

Finally, the webinar series presented by CASE guided participants through a COVID-19 continuum of service delivery options relating to the continuum of school closure efforts to assist participants in thinking through the level of supports being provided now and in preparation for the future. Additionally, CASE provided considerations relating to position statements for flexibility considerations with compliance with IDEA and Endrew F, the possible impact of the CARES act, ESY considerations, etc. Below, please find examples of the continuum discussed during the webinar.

Continuum of Closure Efforts
